

Concept Theme:

Samantha Garstang October 2013

Looking at the book and lesson ideas for "What the World Eats", students will be able to:

- Locate countries represented on the world map
- Name the oceans of the world
- Calculate sums and differences of dollars spent in each country (including theirs)
- Track their own family's food costs/ inventories for a week
- Photograph their groceries for a typical week
- Keep a log book with receipts of their weekly groceries
- Create a bar graph placing themselves on the map around food cost and kinds of food eaten
- Understand healthy food choices
- Operate a classroom "store"

Culminating Activity:

Class potluck celebration and photo display, sharing graphs and information about the value of food and community.

Connections:

Throughout this learning cycle, students will be producing items to sell at a Winter Craft Faire and the class "store" will be practice for selling and giving change at this event.
